Network Security Policy

Access to ISBER's wireless network is not guaranteed; nor is uptime, accessibility, and support. ISBER's wireless network may not be used under any circumstances to download, torrent, or pirate any copyright infringing materials. Users shall not share the wireless access point passphrase or their personal login information. Each user is responsible for their own account and the network traffic they generate. Wireless access should be used for work and research related to ISBER. User access to the wireless network may be terminated at any time, without prior notice, for reasons including but not limited to: excessive bandwidth usage, peer-to-peer file sharing, and suspicious or malicious network activity. The use of a compromised device on the ISBER wireless network is strictly prohibited and will result in immediate termination of access.

Wireless network access is intended for users currently employed by, or affiliated with ISBER. All other users who have a legitimate need to use the wireless network for ISBER programs and centers related business must seek an existing ISBER faculty or staff member to endorse their use of the wireless network. The endorser will accept responsibility for the user if the user is not able to be contacted.

The use of ISBER's wireless network does not constitute support of the wireless device; users are responsible for their own personal wireless devices. ISBER does not, and will not support devices that have not been purchased with funding administered by ISBER.
